Business Looking Up.

Whether the election of either of the candidates will affect business locally or not is a question which is being asked by business on the railroad has picked up greatly. During the past few weeks all the roads have been short on cars to move the immense crops of grain. Trade is also picking up in retail circles. Hughes, the men's outfitter, at 415 Broadway, reports his trade almost double the former. The clothing store at 101 Broadway, reports his trade as being better than for some time.

Good thing. Hughes is probably getting more than his share. He undoubtedly has the best line of hats, neckties and shirts in the city, and his prices are always a little lower than elsewhere.

SHOWS SOME FOOT PRINTS

Close Investigation in the Axe Murder Case Develops Nothing.

CORONER'S INQUEST HELD YESTERDAY

Jury Finds that Murder Was Done by Some Unknown Person and Recommends the Release of Tom Harnett.

No definite clue has been obtained by the police in any way tends to unravel the mystery surrounding the murder of Mrs. J. L. Axe, whose body was found in a lonely place on Thirtieth street Tuesday morning.

Considerable valuable time was lost in getting started on the case because of the mistake made in the coroner's office when the body was found in disposing of his victim.

When it was learned that she had not been shot, but was dead to death with a blunt instrument, a thorough search of the place of the murder was made.

This was again renewed yesterday morning by the officers and a slight clue discovered.

About 200 feet from the place where the body was found is the home of Herman Schneider. Just across Avenue C, in front of the cottage, is a potato patch.

The soil here is soft and damp. In looking about for the instrument with which the murder might have been committed, the officers came across distinct tracks.

They were plainly made by right and left shoes, far apart, as if the person wearing them was on the "PIT THE SHOES."

There are also shoe prints of a woman's foot. These are in such a relative position to others that they evidently were made at the same time while going alone together.

No one has been across this potato patch for a long time, according to the statement of Mr. Schneider. The police yesterday morning took T. D. Harnett's shoes and compared them to the prints in the soil.

The prints fitted exactly even to an impression in the soil of the right shoe. It has been worn badly and has a large crack across the middle. This was distinctly visible in the track made in the potato patch.

The dead woman's shoes did not correspond with the prints in the soil.

The tracks were made by a shoe somewhat smaller than the one worn by Mrs. Axe. In going across the potato patch the persons who had made the tracks came to Kansas street and turned a hundred feet.

This potato patch lies directly southeast of the place where the body was found, and would be the natural course for one walking toward Omaha, and who wanted to avoid going down Thirtieth street.

that his mother spoke something about supper being late and that she was going out that evening. He had helped her carry in some of the plants. Dr. Cappel had said to him at 5 o'clock that he wanted to see him, and would call upon her in his way to supper. He did not know of any one with whom his mother was intimately acquainted.

Charles Harnett, a son of the woman she pressed to be very intimate, was engaged to marry as soon as his term of service was over. Harnett had been sent away with the regiment two months ago and was still out of the city. He said that his mother had been married a number of times, and that he believed that the husband whose name she bore was still living somewhere.

They had been separated a couple of times and made it up again. The last and final separation was eleven years ago. The witness said his mother was 42 when he left the house on Monday evening. He then described minutely his whereabouts during the remainder of the night. He went directly from the house to Sampson's cigar store, 1711 St. Mary's avenue, and was there with slight interruptions until 3 o'clock.

During one of these interruptions he left the place with Jimmy Hoagland and was gone an hour. He went to Tenth and Douglas street, and had a drink and then went to the house of Douglas, where he met Mr. Harnett and Dick Landon of Council Bluffs. This was at Emil Gail's saloon. They returned to Sampson's, visiting several places in the city.

After leaving the saloon, he walked around the streets with Harnett and Keene until daylight, and then gave in their order the names of places visited during the remainder of the night until he was taken into custody by the Omaha police. When asked to think if he could not recall some one who had frequently visited the saloon, he said a man named Cahill, a blacksmith, a short, stout, heavy built fellow, had given her the name of Douglas, and that he had frequently intercepted her on the streets; that she had complained to Captain King, and the man had not troubled her since. She was dismissed.
